10 POLICIES FOR LGBTQI+ INCLUSION

Want to make your athletic department more LGBTQI+-inclusive? Here are the 10 policies every program should have.

(1) LGBTQI+-INCLUSIVE NONDISCRIMINATION POLICY

Teams should have a written nondiscrimination policy that explicitly covers “sexual orientation,” “gender identity,” “gender expression,” and “sex characteristics.” This can be accomplished by adding these classes to existing nondiscrimination protections or inserting a stand-alone clause to existing policy materials.

(2) LEAGUE LGBTQI+-INCLUSIVE CODE OF CONDUCT

The league or organization to which your team belongs should explicitly ban or condemn homophobic, transphobic, and/or anti-LGBTQI+ conduct by players, coaches and any staff involved in athletic activities. This can be accomplished by a stand-alone clause or by including LGBTQI+ protections in existing harassment policies. These codes of conduct should outline potential consequences for engaging in behaviors that violate the code of conduct, including clear, safe, and perhaps anonymous mechanisms to report and address the violation.

(3) TEAM LGBTQI+-INCLUSIVE CODE OF CONDUCT

Individual teams should be encouraged to create Codes of Conduct that clearly state an expectation to promote respect towards LGBTQI+ people. These Codes of Conduct should clearly outline potential consequences for engaging in behaviors that violate the code of conduct and be directly communicated to all team members at the start of the season.

(4) INCLUSIVE FAN CODE OF CONDUCT

The league/organization’s commitment to inclusion, respect and safety should extend to members of their fan community. Fans, like players and coaches, should not be subjected to discriminatory language and behavior by those on the field or in the stands. These values and expectations should be communicated to fans via the league’s official fan code of conduct. In addition, the fan code of conduct should outline potential consequences for engaging in behaviors that violate the code of conduct, including clear mechanisms to report and address the violation.

(5) LGBTQI+-INCLUSIVE MEDIA COMMUNICATIONS

Leagues and teams should ensure all media communications and recruiting materials (media guides, community outreach, team camp brochures, etc.) include nondiscrimination language. Members of the organization or team who are in most frequent touch with the media should have LGBTQI+-specific media training. For an example of LGBTQI+-inclusive media materials, see Athlete Ally and GLAAD’s Guide to Covering LGBTQ+ Athletes at the 2022 Winter Olympics and Paralympics.

Athlete Ally believes sport will change the world when it welcomes and empowers all people. As a leading national nonprofit working at the intersection of sport and LGBTQ equality, Athlete Ally works to end the structural and systemic oppression that isolates, excludes, and endangers LGBTQ people in sport. We educate individuals and institutions to understand obstacles to inclusion for LGBTQ people and how they can build an inclusive culture within their athletic communities. We work to ensure sport governing bodies, teams and leagues adopt policies that reflect the diversity of their constituents. We incubate athlete activism to advance LGBTQ equality in and through sport.
Leagues should have a clear and well-written policy regarding the participation of transgender and non-binary athletes. Many sport leagues and teams across the country have adopted trans inclusive policies and guidelines, including the NCAA and International Olympic Committee. USports, the national sport governing body of university sport in Canada, released a groundbreaking policy in 2018 allowing transgender athletes to self-identify and participate on the sports team consistent with their gender identity without restriction. For model policies or to learn more about the history of trans and non-binary athlete participation in sport, please reach out to Athlete Ally and visit Chris Mosier’s website TransAthlete.com for a comprehensive list of all K-12 policies.

All dress code policies should be gender neutral to allow for different forms of gender expression. An example of a non-inclusive dress code is one that would require people on a women’s team to wear skirts or dresses to events where professional dress is required. A best practice is to simply outline the type or style of clothing that will not be accepted as professional attire rather than dictate which clothes people should wear based on sex assigned at birth.

Excellent LGBTQI+ inclusion policies will be ineffective if these policies are not adequately communicated to the people they impact. Therefore, having timely trainings is essential for creating LGBTQI+ inclusive environments.

As a best practice, these trainings should:
- Be held at least once a school year;
- Be mandatory for all coaches, players, and staff;
- Review all LGBTQI+ harassment policies and team Codes of Conduct;
- Cover allyship best practices.

Athletic departments should also maintain up-to-date LGBTQI+ inclusion resources that are readily available to coaches, players, and staff throughout the year, in between training sessions.

Have a clear and visible reporting mechanism for reporting incidences of racist, sexist, homophobic, transphobic and other harmful conduct and harassment. These policies should allow for anonymous reporting, have clearly stated timelines for action, outline a non-exhaustive list of disciplinary actions, be visible, published in student-athlete handbooks, and distributed during orientation.

Schools should make every effort to allow athletes to use the bathrooms and changing facilities in which they feel most comfortable and safe. At a minimum, schools should provide private changing spaces and showers in the men’s and women’s locker rooms to accommodate transgender, nonbinary, and other individuals who desire privacy. Players, coaches, and staff also should be permitted to use the facilities consistent with their gender identity. These policies should be communicated clearly in the student handbook.
